Hello Everyone,

What did you do at preschool this week?

Child Protection Curriculum.
 Celebrating Eid (a religious holiday) was yummy.

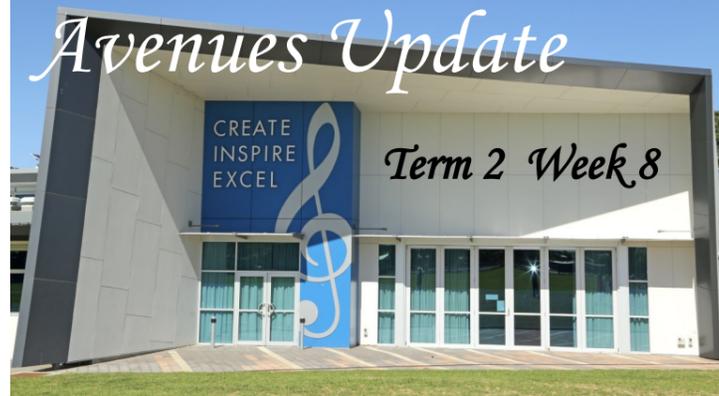

Rats !!
 Our child care friends visited.

Science is the 'S' in STEM, physics to be specific.

Dear Parents and Caregivers

The end of the term and semester is fast approaching which means Student Reports will soon be coming home. You will notice there is 'new look' report this year providing information and grades for each of the subject areas studied. In addition you will see a number of large, coloured squares; these are indicators of your child/ren's learning habits. Being half way through the year the children will not have had the opportunity to focus on the whole curriculum, meaning they are still developing their skills and knowledge in order to meet the whole achievement standard. I always like to remind parents that the grading system is quite different now to what it was in 'our day' with a C grade now reflecting exactly what is expected at the year level. The other slight difference this year is the student reflection on their learning and social capabilities. Rather than writing a comment this year, students have had the opportunity to self-assess on the last page indicating what they think about their personal capabilities. I very much hope you enjoy reading about you child/ren's learning as I have. Our teachers have worked very hard to be truly reflective and accurate in their representations and I commend their efforts. Reports will be sent home with students on the last day of this term.

I would very much like to welcome a new staff member to our site; Rob Newton is an experienced Information Technology and Digital Arts teacher. He has begun working with students this week and will increase lessons in the coming weeks. Students are currently exploring coding and will also have the opportunity to create digital collages based on the research they do for NAIDOC Week. We feel very lucky to have Rob as he brings a new and different skill set to our children. Be sure to ask them next week how Computing is going!

We will see out the term with learning related to NAIDOC Week, which is celebrated in the first week of the holidays. This year's theme is 'Because of Her, We Can...' We will be learning about significant Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women, past and present, and their contributions to community. There are some truly remarkable people out there with fascinating and unique stories. Hopefully, the foyer will display much of this learning as we begin Term 3!
 Kind regards

Year 6/7

Story starters

The year 6/7's were shown some unusual and interesting pictures. Their task was to write the beginning of a story, but of course it had to be so interesting that we wanted to keep reading.

Here are some of their story starters.

Darth Vader in a race car!

The Hulk with a dog leash in his hand.

Darth Vader drove his car to go to Macca's to buy 1,000 Big Macs for his Stormtroopers. They had just been in a big battle and needed food for energy.....
River

As the Hulk was walking with his dog on a cold and misty day, he let his dog off the leash as they were the only ones in the park on that particular day. The dog ran off and Hulk had to chase him down the street and ended up in a coffee shop. While he was there he decided that he may as well order a flat white with no sugar.....
Evelyn

When the war was finally over between the Jedi's and the Stormtrooper's, all Darth Vader wanted to do was to buy a car! He has wanted one for so long, but there was a problem – money, he had none! In Darth's mind there was only one solution, steal a car
Tahlayah

The dog was frightened! There was this enormous, gigantic, green mutant in front of him, and... he had a leash! He wanted to run away but his little legs failed him
Joeanna

What the heck! Here I am taking a well-deserved holiday in Italy and after checking into the hotel I went to explore in the rental car. And what do I see next to me? Darth Vader! Yes! The Darth Vader from Star Wars. What on earth was he doing here? On Earth!
